

JAPANESE SLAIN; BRIDE MERCILESSLY SLASHED: FORMER LOVER IN JAIL

Crime Follows Reconciliation Dinner After Brother-In-Law Had Beaten Woman Victim and Cut Off Her Hair Because She Insisted Upon Marrying Man He Objected To

A SECOND arrest in connection with the murder of Hiroko Emoto, a Japanese, at the Waikiki home of James B. Castle yesterday morning, was made at five o'clock yesterday afternoon. Makoto Kanamoto, a former lover of Mrs. Emoto, whose murder he slayer of her husband also attempted, is held by the police.

Mrs. Waichiro Fujimoto, wife of the first man arrested, affirmed last night that her husband did not leave their home after the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Emoto until the police arrested him about four o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Fujimoto and Mrs. Emoto are sisters. The murder at the Castle home occurred in the early morning after the Emotos had been guests of the Fujimotos.

large dagger for the purpose ascertaining whether the wounds on the body of Emoto and his wife could have been inflicted with it.

Doctor Ayer gave it as his opinion that the dagger could have been the weapon used.

Then three friends, Mrs. Ammala and two men, Fujita and Karamata, all employed as servants at Waikiki homes, urged upon the two families that they should forget their differences, and Fujimoto consented to give a dinner. It was to be the seal of their new friendship.

Five Guests At Dinner

A. S. Kozuki, Japanese detective, and K. Izumi, special policeman, arrested Kanamoto. He is a chauffeur employed at the Aala stand.

Mrs. Fujimoto said last night that her sister, Mrs. Emoto, had confessed to her, before her marriage to Emoto, that her lover named Kanamoto was an automobile driver, but beyond that Mrs. Fujimoto remembered nothing concerning him.

Statements were made by Mrs. Fujimoto as to her husband, which, if

To the dinner came the five guests driven by Emoto.

They departed, driven by Emoto about eleven-twenty o'clock, Mrs. Fujimoto said:

Then, into this newly-erected structure of family reunion, the axe of the murderer crashed.

Mrs. Fujimoto was awakened at four o'clock to hear that her sister's husband had been killed, that her sister probably was mortally hurt and that her husband was suspected of having Five guests were at the Fujimoto home, in the rear of 1749 Kulaoka avenue, Thursday evening. The banquet was one to renew old ties of kinship, broken a month before. It was an occasion for the Kuroda clan, the identification of friends, who wished to see an end to the estrangement.

How Bitterness Was Engendered

This bitterness had arisen from an assault made upon Mrs. Emoto by her brother-in-law, Fujimoto, before her marriage, as he did not wish her to marry and she was determined to marry and maintain her younger brother.

It was after this assault that Mrs. Emoto, then Tome Ogawa, was taken from the Fujimoto home by James B. and Harold Castle.

As she told her story the touch-headed young brother, twelve or thirteen years old, who had been the cause of the assault, sat in the corner, and begged upon the floor and interjected a syllable now and then.

Had her husband loved her sister Mrs. Fujimoto was asked; and she smiled rather wanly and said she didn't know.

The girl had said that she

Her husband and she retired immediately. Her sister Nami Ogawa, who was at their home, and the younger brother retired.

Mrs. Fujimoto and infant occupied the same bed as the husband. He could not have left it without moving over to the other side.

Mrs. Emoto Is Unconscious

Mrs. Emoto was unconscious at the Queen's Hospital last night. It is feared that she will not recover. An X-ray photograph of her skull showed that the brain had been penetrated by a sharp edged weapon. It is from the latter wound that death may result. According to Dr. Jay Kuhns, in at

ED tendance, she has recovered consciousness only on two occasions, once to ask for water and once to be told of her husband's death. When

The dead man was twenty-seven years old and his wife is seventeen. The murder was discovered by Sing, a Chinese cook, who, while on his way to the Castle home, heard the screams of Tong Sing. He found her lying in her room, near the door, and bleeding profusely from the head. He was crying "Please you go tell boss." Harold Castle was summoned. Dr. G. Hodgins, Chief of Detectives ly, hoping to prevent her marriage and consequent failure to care for her brother.

Fujimoto beat her with a bamboo flute, bruising her body painfully, and cut off her hair.

When she had not returned to their home Sunday afternoon following, the police and Harold Castle went to the Fujimoto home and removed the girl.

Thereafter she was kept at the Castle's home.

On June 11, 1936, the girl was taken to the emergency hospital, where examination by Police Surgeon A. J. B. showed that she had six gashes on her body from her head to her knee, a large cut in her left, which pierced the bone.

No clue was in her skull by the assassin other than an entrance to the head was made by breaking the glass on the door.
